LR 5

So every one of your prayers is answered, but the answer is no. You don't think it through. It looks alluring on the surface, or somebody in whom you have confidence says that it's good. And you will say, I personally don't see value in it, but they say it's good, so it must be good. I will follow along. However this motion is voted on, I'm not going to offer any amendments to this thing because I...there's no way to improve it. The only motion that will improve it is the one that's up there before us now, and that is to indefinitely postpone it.

PRESIDENT' ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Bromm.

SENATOR BROMM: Madam President, colleagues, when this bill started out, I was in favor of a minor shortening of the session. I thought we could be slightly more efficient in our time, and there's never enough time to get everything done, and what you want to do expands to fill the time that you have. That's for sure, and that rule applies here. Now it's taking a little different course. And for my part, I think we've missed the main advantage of coming in in December for three days, and it just occurred to me this morning. With Senator Chambers commitment not to be here, and with us doing the elections the first day, getting our offices changed the third day, or second day, and doing rules the third day. I think we'll be off to a great start. (Laughter.) And I went over and told Senator Chambers that, and he said, again, and he's right, it doesn't matter what rule you pass, I'll get along anyway, so...and I know that's right, too. Seriously, the only reservation that I really have about this is that, for those in western Nebraska, if I were there and if I were still trying to conduct a business or practice law or whatever the vocation might be, I could see where it would be a little more difficult. It just would create more commitments for you at another portion of the year, and that gives me some concerns. And I think we have to weigh that with the advantages. There are advantages. Senator Stuhr has pointed them out very well. I think some of the organizational procedures that we have to carry out, it would be nice to separate that a little bit and have it done...everybody have their office and have a little better chance to get more organized. That's a little bit of an advantage. But I have...I do have...I have some real deep concerns for those that have to travel a long ways and what it's going to do to them. Those
